Description

have both now been extended at either end. Originally the chimneys stood at each gabled end of the cottages and the roof at the rear went down to the ground floor, a not uncommon feature in these cottages. The living room was in the front (measuring 15x13 feet) and kitchen to the rear. Each cottage had two bedrooms (SC) with sloping ceilings. From at least 1841 until the 1860's No 330 had been the home of Joseph Edwards, a colliery labourer, and his wife Elizabeth, but by 1861 she was living here as a widow with her daughter (38), a laceworker, and her 22 year old son, an agricultural labourer, and his wife.

Local Heritage Asset Register

Bilborough HA634

Additional Description:

In No 332 at this time were the Burrows, another mining family. In 1851 William Burrows (58) is a miner as is his eldest son aged 17 and his youngest at only 11, though his fourteen year old son is listed as “scholar”. By 1861 William is dead, his widow is 65 and the younger son has survived and is still a miner, whilst the scholar has become an agricultural labourer.
There was another pair of cottages next door, but these have now been demolished and replaced by three houses. Beyond these is the final, the finest.
